

THE EVENING BULLETIN
FRIDAY, AUGUST 28, 1885.

The Prosperity of the South.
The Harrisburg (Pa.) Patriot says: "The South is about entering a period of great prosperity. Its press speaks enthusiastically of business prospects which the absence of political disturbance and an abundant crop of everything that is needed for home use or trade, present to the Southern people. No such crops have been seen in thirty years as these that section this year. In addition to a cotton crop which is estimated at over 7,000,000 bales, says the Savannah News, there is an extraordinary corn crop and more than an average rice crop, and the farmer enters upon the season with less indebtedness than usual."

Such a promising state of affairs in an important part of our country can not fail to gratify those who take an interest in the welfare of the whole. The South has had a long period of depression. She has suffered political and financial misfortunes. But the worst is over, and a new South is about entering upon a new career of prosperity brought about by a new system of labor, new channels of enterprise and new processes of industry applied to the development of her wonderful natural resources.

Seven million bales of cotton represent an immense amount of wealth. A region capable of producing it has the means of great prosperity, and there is something wonderful in the increase of this production over what it was before the war. The largest amount raised in any one year during that era was three and a half millions of bales, and then it was thought that cotton was king. It was also believed that the institution of slavery was indispensable to its successful production. A crop by free labor that is as large as the largest produced in the slave times, shows what an amazing change has taken place. Cotton is not king in the sense in which it was once claimed to be, but its power in a commercial sense is twice as great as it was at any time before slavery went out of existence.

Another evidence of the substantial prosperity of the South is the great increase in the production of iron and steel. There is an unusually abundant yield this year. In the old plantation days comparatively very little of this important mineral was raised in the South, the planters depending upon the West for their supply of iron and steel. The increased attention given to this production is adding another item to the agricultural resources of that section. In addition to this its minerals are being developed and manufacturing enterprises are assuming a vigorous activity.

The South has left her rough times behind in the receding past. What with her political troubles, the ravages of war, the succeeding ravages of the carpet-baggers, and the burden imposed upon her by the conversion of a vast ignorant slave population into voting citizens, she was well nigh swamped. But she is getting bravely over her troubles, and no good citizen, in whatever section he may live, can regard her deliverance with any other feeling than that of pleasure.

Spain reports 4,300 new cases of cholera and 1,547 deaths.

The London Times says England will never listen to a plan for the separation of Ireland.

The Charleston News and Courier estimates the loss in that city by Tuesday's cyclone at $1,123,000.

The Ohio Democrats took no step backward and the election next fall will put them far in the front.

Captain T. D. MARCUM, of the Oatleburg Democrat, will be a candidate for Sargeant-at-Arms of the Senate.

It is said that the industrial establishment are talking of advancing the wages of labor. If it be true the late Republicans stump speakers will wonder what the future party issues will be.

The political rustlers who are trying to make it appear that a deadly enemy has sprung up between the President and Mr. Tilden, will have more trouble in getting the people to believe it than they had in inventing the story.

Such is the evincing influence exerted by a Democratic administration that many of the iron mills at Pittsburgh are pressed with orders and are working over time to fill them. If these mills were idle the Republican papers would charge it to the administration. They are busy the administration should by parity of reasoning have the credit for it.

FORAKER, the Republican candidate for Governor of Ohio, has thrown a new issue into the campaign by declaring from the stump that he and General Grant were born in adjoining counties. Two years ago he attempted to make some capital out of the fact that in his early youth he had worn a pair of breeches made out of a coffee sack. Such issues sprung on the voters do not seem to have the desired effect.

Mr. Kelley Home.
NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—Mr. A. M. Kelley, whose diplomatic career has been checked, peculiar and brief, has returned home. In an interview he said: "I start for Washington immediately to make my report. What I shall do after that I cannot say, as my case is now in the hands of the state department. I was not in Washington for some time as there was no reason for my remaining abroad. I did not visit either Rome or Vienna."

"What reason did Austria give for declining to receive you?" asked the reporter. "I cannot answer that question for the reason that it is something the state department may not wish to make public. I say this, however, I have no idea at present as to whether it is something the state department may not wish to make public. I say this, however, I have no idea at present as to whether it is something the state department may not wish to make public."

"With Italy the case is different. The reason given by that government appealed to me as having in it something of force, and as I could not well do anything that might embarrass my own government by forcing upon it a course, regarded as such as the reason was made known to me. It certainly would have been embarrassing for King Humbert to receive the minister of this government a man who had so severely damaged his father. The reason given by Austria as that she cannot commend themselves to any thinking community especially in this day and age."

"It has been generally understood in this country that Austria's refusal was based on the fact that your wife is a Hebrew and on that account could not be received by the Austrian court?"
"And would not that be a frivolous reason in this age of the world? Austria has enabled members of that race whether they are received at court or not. I cannot say. I think Austria's refusal was based on the fact that your wife is a Hebrew and on that account could not be received by the Austrian court?"

Governor Hoadly.
NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—Governor Hoadly, of Ohio, was met in the rotunda of the City hall by a crowd of people. He was asked as to his opinion with regard to the result of the campaign in his state, which was opened at Mt. Pleasant, by Senator Sherman. He predicted that the campaign would be close and both parties would have to work hard.

"Senator Sherman," he continued, "is wearing the blue shirt. That will undoubtedly be the Republican cry, but I fail to see how the bloody shirt issue can be revived when even the capital building in Columbus has been taken from Gen. Grant, and his words: 'Let us have peace,' are visible in large letters. Referring to the Prohibition movement, the governor said he had no doubts that the Prohibitionists would draw from both parties, but mostly from the Republicans. Our platform is in favor of high license and on that line we propose to fight. The governor expressed the belief that the Democrats would carry the state, but that there would be no great majorities. Judge Foraker, he said, was in full sympathy with the issue. Senator Sherman was making, and would probably soon take the stump. The Democrats will open the campaign next Saturday at Hamilton, where the governor said he himself would speak, and address Governor Hoadly concluded by saying that his trip east was not for the purpose of getting points from Mr. Tilden and that he did not even intend to call on that gentleman."

Kansas Grasshoppers.

A lady visiting Kansas writes of the grasshopper invasion in a letter from the usual unsympathetic manner: "If you are not quite sure that they are not intending to do a flight of grasshoppers, it is a beautiful thing to see. All day they floated over us; millions upon millions of tiny little creatures with their wings raised, wings spread to the light, mounting steadily toward the sun, as it seemed. It was like a movement in sun-birds, if you can picture such a thing, with the noise rising instead of falling."

Declared Off.

"Are your costs paid?" asked Angelina, as her head reposed gracefully on William's breast.

"No. Why do you ask?" he inquired fondly.

"Because they are so much softer than Martin's, or John's, either, for that matter."

The engagement is broken.

FOR LOVE OF A WOMAN.

SLASHED HIS THROAT AFTER ATTEMPTING DOUBLE MURDER.

A Married Woman Cut with a Razor by a Man Who Had Previously Abducted Her—He Tried to Kill His Captor and then Attempted Suicide.

New York, Aug. 28.—"Oh, I'm so thankful! You have saved my life," exclaimed a woman whose face, neck and hands were covered with blood, as she ran down Division street, near Norfolk. Near the corner a crowd of excited people were gathered round two men who were struggling with a wild-eyed, gaunt-looking man, who fought desperately. He had attempted to murder the woman with a razor, and after his capture he escaped to a cellar in Hester street and cut his throat.

The woman is Mrs. Anna Eppler, aged thirty-nine years, a little woman with light-brown hair and round, laughing face. It is 1897 she married Andreas Eppler, who was then a baker for Carl Schalk at No. 190 Nassau street. Eppler is a native of Wurttemberg, and was an officer in the Fourth Wurttemberg cavalry. He served his country till 1868, when, in consequence of his relatives' opposition to his proposed marriage, he came to this country. The couple have one child, a boy of about sixteen years. Eppler has previously launched out in business for himself, making and losing considerable money. Among his other ventures was the Apennine Hotel, a German inn at No. 51 Westchester street. This place he sold last Christmas and bought another on Rose street, near New Chambers. While at Westchester street the Epplers had a boarder, for five or six weeks, John Roggenbrol, forty-eight years old, and a native of Baden. He has served at various times in the capacity of farmer's hand and as driver for a brewery.

This man became infatuated with Eppler's wife and this was noticed by Eppler, who when he changed his place of business left Roggenbrol behind. The latter, however, was not so easily fooled, and he decided upon the novel plan of kidnapping the former host's beautiful wife, which he successfully carried out. January 18 last Mrs. Eppler disappeared from her home. She had gone to Washington Market, but she did not return. When the $800 of her husband's money also vanished, and Eppler went to the Central office and told Detective Von Gerichten his tale. Search was made for the wife and money and also for Roggenbrol, but to no purpose.

Six weeks ago the long-missing wife reappeared as unexpected as she had gone away. The $800 which she had taken with her she did not bring back. She said that while on her way to the market on the day of her disappearance she was seized by Roggenbrol, who, after a few words, gagged and chloroformed her and when she awoke became conscious she found herself in Philadelphia.

"What does this mean?" she asked him. "Your husband is no good. I want you," he answered.

He then compelled her, by threats, to remain with him, and they lived in furnished rooms at No. 110 West 101st street. Three weeks, when they went to Englishtown, N. J., where both were employed on a farm—she as farm-hand and she in the kitchen. Here they remained six weeks and then came to No. 95 West Houston street, this city, where she remained until she returned to her husband, who had meanwhile established a cheap restaurant in an old tumble-down two-story frame house at No. 7 Chrystie street.

Before she left Roggenbrol he said to her: "If you ever leave me and go back to your husband I'll follow and kill you. You'll never live with him again."

A week ago last Saturday Mrs. Eppler went marketing in Bayard street. Her husband watched her, and as she crossed Division street he saw Roggenbrol dodge out from behind an elevated railroad pillar and grab his wife. He struck her and was about to drag her away, when Eppler came to her rescue, kicked the man and took his wife home.

Between 4 and 5 o'clock Mrs. Eppler left home to go to No. 24 Forsyth street. She went through Division street, intending to stop at a fancy goods store at Market street. She had just reached the corner when she was met by her abductor, who struck her on the head. Almost simultaneously he drew a razor from his coat pocket and slashed her in the face, cutting her cheek and ear. Another thrust was parried by the woman's hand, which was nearly severed from her wrist.

Mrs. Eppler screamed and a man came to her assistance, but as quickly left her. The would-be assassin ran up East Broadway, his victim following as fast as she could. Her breath gave out, and she paid a boy to run after the man and keep him in sight. Pursued by a pursuers turned into Tweed plaza, or Rutgers street, and at the corner of East Broadway, Michael Price, of No. 23 East Broadway, seeing the bleeding woman running, jumped from a street car and stopped her.

"What's the matter?" he asked quickly. "That man cut me twice!" she gasped. Price gave chase to Roggenbrol and a score of others joined in the pursuit. At Norfolk and Division streets Price caught the fugitive and was assisted in holding him by Edward Hirschberg, of No. 220 Madison street. The man was dragged along toward Eldridge street station, but when in front of No. 44 Mott street he fought his way. Price had hold of his right arm, but with his left Roggenbrol pulled the bloody razor from his inside coat pocket, swung it open and attempted to cut Price's throat. It was the back side of the blade that struck the flesh, and before he could repeat the attempt he was thrown headlong into the hallway of No. 44.

While awaiting the arrival of a policeman the man was heard running through the hall and it was thought he had escaped through the rear or by way of the roof. When Officer Collins, of the Eldridge street station, arrived, Roggenbrol was found looking in the cellar. He was lying on the ground, with his throat gashed half way across and a stream of blood spouting from the wound. He still clutched the razor in his hand. He was taken to the Chambers street hospital, where it is thought he will not live. He would say nothing after being arrested.

The woman was taken to the station house, where her wounds were dressed, and subsequently she went to Chambers street hospital and had them redressed. They are not of a serious character and she was sent home.
